

Does allowing these types of unreasonable searches of people's data constitute a breach of trust of the American people? Absolutely. Is the government's memory so short that it forgot about Carnivore, the e-mail snooping program the FBI already employs? Turn the tables around and ask yourselves if this is best for the government or for the people of this country?